

BORDLEY TOWNSHIP PROJECT

WHAT WE DID TODAY

17th April 2013

RETURN TO KEALCUP LAITHE

Wednesday 17 April an overcast & very windy day saw David Emmott, Pauline Barber & myself pleased to get up to Bordley after all the bad weather. The main aim was to gather more information for the Building Report on Kealcup Laithe. It was particularly useful for myself as it was my first visit, having previously only studied it through David's excellent drawings & photographs. The site has a touch of the 'Wuthering Heights' about it, remote and a bit neglected but atmospheric with amazing long distance views. Much speculation ensued about its past life, construction phases and decline, and we came away once again enthused over this special area.

Pauline at Kealcup Laithe

Andrew Murgatroyd

17/04/2013

Pauline making friends

Unexplained marks in lime mortar